The Cooking Clock.

The latest achievement in portable double action furniture is the cooking clock. It is made of white wood, stained cherry, and is constructed after the style of the old-fashioned grandfather's clock. Here the resemblance ceases, however, for before one is through inspecting its multiform surpulses one wonders whether some bright little automaton will not spring out of a concealed drawer or secret receptacle and offer you a diamond ting and a chromo. In the first place the lower part of this mighty engine of domestic economy contains a gas oline stove, which, when in use, is pulled out like a drawer from its resting place. Below the stove is a receptacle for kitchenware, while above it is a china closet containing 4 shelves. Above all this is perched a calendar clock, back of which is attached a gasoline vapor tank, which is connected with the stove by a pipe concealed behind the case. You might suppose that this collection of conveniences would have satisfied its enterprising inventor—but no. To the left and oline stove, which, when in use, is pulled out like a drawer from its resting place. Below the stove is a receptacle for kitchenware, while above it is a china closet containing 4 shelves. Above all this is perched a calendar clock, back of which is attached a gaso-BARB FENCING WIRE.
